Call for Papers

The Eastern Mediterranean Health Journal, EMHJ, is inviting submission of high-quality, original papers related to public health research and practice of relevance and interest to the Region, particularly in the areas of the regional health priorities of: Health systems' strengthening; Maternal, reproductive and child health and nutrition; Noncommunicable diseases and mental health; Communicable diseases; and Emergency preparedness and response.

About EMHJ

EMHJ, established in 1995, is the flagship health periodical of the World Health Organization Regional Office for the Eastern Mediterranean.

The mission of the Journal is to contribute to improving health in the Eastern Mediterranean Region by publishing and publicising quality health research and information with emphasis on public health and the strategic health priorities of the Region. It aims to: further public health knowledge, policy, practice and education; support health policy-makers, researchers and practitioners; and enable health professionals to remain informed of developments in public health.
